Bob Dylan Receives France's Legion of Honour Award

Bob Dylan has been awarded France's highest decoration, the Legion of Honour, for his contributions to culture and art as a musician and poet. Currently on tour in Europe, Dylan attended a brief ceremony in Paris where France's Minister of Culture and Communication, Aurélie Filippetti, presented him with the distinction. Dylan commented that he was "proud and grateful" for the honor, though had little else to say before his departure. Dylan was previously denied the award for past political stances and personal actions deemed unsuitable for the Legion of Honour.
